Learn how to create a truly inclusive school, gain a sharper understanding of gender, and learn how to respond to issues raised by community members.

The topic of gender, including issues related to transgender students, is front and center for our nation's educators. A shifting legal landscape, growing visibility for transgender and other gender diverse young people, and widely divergent perspectives about the questions being raised by this topic can be confusing, if not overwhelming for educational leaders. This engaging full-day session will address the following important subjects:

- What is gender, and how does it relate to a person's physical sex or sexual orientation?
- What does it mean for a child to be transgender?
- How can schools meet the needs of gender diverse students?
- What do gender inclusive practices look like and how can schools move toward incorporating them?
- How can school leaders respond to the issues that various community members raise about the topic?
- What is the Gender Inclusive Schools Network and how can schools connect?

Programs Ends at 3:15 p.m. Sharp!
